Waiting for the Official Count.

Everybody, including the Democrats themselves, seem to recognize the absurdity of their celebrating as an assured fact the alleged election of their National candidates, while they and the rest of the world are still waiting to ascertain the result of the struggle in that great State even-tful to their success. The hysterical and mischievous spell of Barnum and Gorman and the positive and excitements of the party appetite have been very [illegible] signalized by a large portion of the Democratic press of New York dwelling to the common salute, while every [illegible] is realized that this must elapse before the victory could be absolutely determined. The sensational claims of the Democratic leaders were intended solely to affect public sentiment and to [illegible] the Republicans from insisting upon a fair count.

[illegible] to a thankful Republicans of the country all concede Cleveland's election, the official announcement of Democratic politicians or newspapers rejoicing before the official returns are in many one of the most important events in the history of the country. The official returns will be laid before the County Supervisors [illegible] and in such close contests will undoubtedly be involved very many questions which will be contested with care and the decision must be made upon further legal and publicity before the results declared.

If the Democrats are sincere in believing Cleveland to have a majority in New York, they should wait to the official count of the votes, to wait for it. This cannot be [illegible]

The Portland newspaper reports [illegible] Democratic Burnham's prediction. The Portland Democratic Committee do believe that Mr Blaine has a fair majority, and they do not hurt but invoke the decision of the lawful ascertainment of the vote of the State.

We commend to every patriotic citizen the address printed in another column addressed to the rural [illegible] of the state that will command itself to the [illegible] of all parts of the country.

The Chief Magistrate of this Nation is not a prize or plunder to be won in street brawls or in the future administration of our great government to be determined by [illegible] to lawless mobs. All that we want to learn in the lawful way just how the vote of the people of New York will weigh in the balance and when the result is properly ascertained it will be [illegible] and loyally recognized by all who love their country and desire the upholding of the great principles of self government.

A Coincidence and a Contrast.

[illegible] remarkable closeness of the vote in the State of New York upon which the result of a National election is pending recalls [illegible] Democratic [illegible] in 1880. On the evening of the election the Fusionists claimed Platt by [illegible] by several thousand plurality and while later returns were more favorable to Davis [illegible] the ring hits election the Fusionists alleged fraud and Chairman Brannan, of the Democratic National Committee, publicly charged the Republicans with [illegible] to count Platt out. Senator Blaine promptly repelled the imputation by a telegram from Boston Sept. 20, 1880 to Hon. Marshall Jewell Chairman of the National Republican Committee, in which he said:

"I left Maine on Friday last. Intelligence received [illegible] that the [illegible] vote as published by the Associated Press is in no case overstated. In the [illegible] clerk's returns as they reach the office of Secretary of State where they are opened in the [illegible] public. The only doubtful cases of such character as to render the contest between Davis and Platt extremely close possibly requiring official returns to determine which is elected. The official returns cannot be counted or even opened until the meeting of the Legislature in January. Every effort in the [illegible] Chairman Brannan is sufficiently answered by the fact that both parties in Maine have recourse to precisely the same authority for the figures. First the telegrams of the Associated Press and second the Clerks returns from the several towns. The talk of Mr Brannan about the Fusionists of Maine being content [illegible] mere rant. There is not a Democrat or Greenbacker in Maine who has the slightest fear of such result. The late General Clifford of Massachusetts used to boast that the Whig party was the only one then in existence that would consult itself out of power and surrender to its opponents on an adverse majority of one vote alluding to the case of Marcus Morton as Governor. The Republicans of Maine who beaten in 1878 could have retained power by two or three technical points in the count. Those who planned the Garcelon count-out of a year later expected the Republicans to do it, and suggested a fear of it, but there was not a single member of the party that ever harbored such a thought. If General Platted shall have a single vote more than Governor Davis the Executive Chair of Maine for the next two years is as well assured to him as if the whole thirty-one thousand

—(Signed) JAMES G BLAINE.

In connection with this we need only to cite the fact that a Legislature nearly two-thirds Republican canvassed the returns from the four hundred towns and declared Plaisted, elected by one hundred and sixty nine plurality in a total of one hundred and forty-eight thousand votes, and contrast the calm, judicial attitude of Mr Blaine whom the political control of his State was pending, with the inflammatory utterances of Democratic leaders. The people of Maine and the country will demand and insist that the result of the National election be determined on the same high grounds enunciated by Mr Blaine in 1880, and that if he proves to have a single vote more than Cleveland his election shall be as absolutely assured and as promptly conceded by his opponents as was Plaisted's in the State of Maine.

Mr Blaine's Candidacy

[Boston Journal, Nov 7]

We are convinced that the Chicago Convention of last June could not have selected a candidate who would have been stronger before the whole country than Mr Blaine. There are candidates who would have been stronger in New England but New England is not the whole country, nor are the Independent headquarters on Washington street the centre of the universe. All through the campaign there has been a natural disposition to overestimate the extent of this so-called Independent movement, because it happened to be noisiest and most active in this vicinity. But in the great Republican States, which properly control Republican nominations and give their electoral votes to the making of Republican Presidents, the force of this Independent movement has been very light. Such as it is moreover, it has not been called into existence by the nomination of Mr Blaine.

It has been a convenient pretext of the Personal assaults upon him and has used them as a battering ram, but to a large extent it was made up of men who were dissatisfied with the Republican party because of its attitude upon protection, and whose change of party affiliations was only hastened, if indeed it was hastened at all, by the nomination of Mr Blaine. Could these gentlemen have had the selection of a Republican candidate they would probably have carried a much longer train of party allegiance with many of them was only a question of time. The large proportion of avowed free-traders among the Independents must be borne in mind, because this is an element whose existence is entirely independent of Mr Blaine's candidacy.

Taking the country through, as we have said, no candidate who could have been chosen would have been stronger than Mr Blaine. No leader of the party would have been capable of presenting the great issues so brilliantly and effectively as he has done. The speeches which he has made during the campaign are models of terse, clear and cogent statement. They have exhibited his remarkable strength and versatility of mind, and they have at the same time deepened the convictions of thousands upon the question of the protection of American industries. He has never for a moment lost his dignity, or descended to discourtesies of any kind but with seriousness and power he has discussed from scores of platforms, and to great multitudes of people the public questions at issue.

No other candidate could have done this so well, nor could any other have made such inroads upon voters hitherto voting with the Democratic party, but whose industries and interests have never been represented by that party's policy. The contests of the future will very largely turn upon this issue of the tariff, and Mr. Blaine's candidacy has done much toward clarifying and emphasizing that issue. The principle that in tariff adjustments protection to American industry and American labor must be taken chiefly into the account is one which will from year to year draw new strength to the Republican party which stands for its defence.

[Boston Journal, Nov 8]

In the uncertainties of the hour, the splendid canvass made by Mr Blaine and the brilliant and sterling qualities which he has displayed during these arduous months, deserve recognition quite as much as if the issue of the contest had been an immediate and decisive victory. Where should we have found a candidate under whose leadership better results could have been accomplished? In Ohio Mr. Blaine awakened the old enthusiasm of the Republicans who loved Garfield and covered his memory, and the magic of his name and presence redeemed the State from the Democratic control into which it had for a time fallen and called forth a splendid Republican majority. He carried the entire Pacific slope, making good the loss occasioned by the Morey letter outrage. In Pennsylvania he called out a Republican plurality of magnificent and phenomenal proportions.

In Tennessee and Virginia and West Virginia, his candidacy so united and stimulated the Republican strength as to almost break up the solid South by carrying those States over to the Republican column. In New England, in spite of most malignant attacks and greatly vaunted defections, he swept every State but Connecticut, which is always difficult and debatable ground. He went into New York, the State of which his competitor is the Governor, and with all the venom of the Independents concentrated against him, he overcame the 192,000 majority by which Cleveland had been chosen Governor, and of which his adherents had boasted so much as a test of his popularity, just makes the result so close that it will require the official count to determine it. Grant that the outcome is not as satisfactory or so decisive as desired, who is the candidate who would have done better or so well?

"Our Flag is Still There"

[Boston Traveller Nov 8]

There is no truth whatever in the report that the Traveller concedes the election of Mr Cleveland. We believe that Mr Blaine has carried New York and will be the next President. The Traveller concedes nothing, and will concede nothing until positive proof is produced.

So long as there is hope the Traveller's flag, with the portraits of Blaine and Logan, will hang over State street, and until that is taken down the supporters of Mr Blaine can rest assured that there is still hope.

WAITING FOR THE OFFICIAL COUNT

[New York Tribune Nov 8]

We still believe Blaine and Logan have received a small majority in the State of New York and are elected. The returns which warrant this conclusion are tabulated from reports made as soon as the votes in the counties are canvassed and announced by every election precinct in the State. The returns on which others build a small majority for Cleveland are generally those telegraphed unofficially from each county seat, and embody whatever errors may be made there in the hasty summaries made by all sorts of men, competent and incompetent.

Obviously nothing can determine this difference but the official count. For that every fair minded man will wait, and by that, when honestly made under legal scrutiny and with all legal and equitable correction every honest citizen must stand.

The Republican National committee has done the wise and prudent thing in engaging the best counsel in every county in the State to see that the rights of Republicans are protected and frauds are not permitted. There is already ample evidence of the need for this, and we rejoice in confident belief that it will be effective. The right will prevail through the open, legal means. Brag and bluster will do for the party that began with a majority sixty thousand, and are now boasting of a little over one sixtieth part as much, and telling how they will fight for it. There will be no fighting except on paper. The fair vote will be fairly counted, legal means will enforce the just result, and we still believe that Blaine and Logan will receive the electoral votes of New York.

[Albany Press Nov 8]

HOW STANDS NEW YORK

The Presidential election hinges on New York and New York remains in doubt and will continue to be in doubt until the official count shall be completed. That is the story in a nutshell.

We believe that Blaine has fairly carried New York and that therefore, he is fairly elected President. We base this conviction upon the best figures and reports thus far attainable. But a review of the figures shall show any error we will review our judgment. We believe that this is the fair way of dealing the cards we are sure that it is far more rational and correct than an absolute declaration on either side, we are persuaded that it is the only just conclusion which can be reached at the present hour.

The columns of Electoral Votes as printed by us today furnishes an interesting study for the patriotic citizen. We have placed the States as at present reported although [illegible] is still some dispute in regard to a few of the States [illegible] in the Democratic column and the Democrats continue to claim New York. It will be seen that while the Republicans have lost the loyal States almost solidly the Democratic column is almost entirely furnished by the solid South where elections are a mockery and the ballot-box a thing of contempt.

The Commercial paid rather an equivocal compliment to Gov Plaisted saturday by printing on its first page a special despatch from him at Augusta stating that Mr Blaine conceded the election of Cleveland, while on its fourth page it printed another special from Augusta declaring the report that Blaine has conceded anything, is an unjustifiable falsehood.

The Republican National Committee

CONFIDENT OF BLAINE'S ELECTION—EVIDENCE OF DEMOCRATIC FRAUD—A FAIR COUNT TO BE INSISTED UPON.

The National Republican committee intends to be conservative and just to everybody, and to act coolly and without precipitation in this crisis, said Mr Elkins this afternoon to a reporter for the Mail and Express. "I am not speaking for myself personally," he said, "but the whole committee." On the line of action to be adopted, he continued, "we are a unit, and I prefer, therefore, that this statement should go forth, not as emanating from me, but from the committee."

"Our committee claims that Mr Blaine has been elected."

"We believe that he has been elected, and, as a matter of course, we therefore claim it. We mean to be fair, and to leave no stone unturned to get at the exact facts. If we discover on investigation that Mr Blaine has not received the vote we think he has, and if we find the frauds were not perpetrated which we have strong evidence pointing to, then as patriotic American citizens, we shall bow to the will of the majority, and concede the election of Cleveland."

"To what frauds especially do you refer?"

"We are in possession of information indicating that in this city, Kings County, Queens County and in counties in the interior of the State the returns have been tampered with since Tuesday night. When the Boards of Canvassers of these counties shall assemble to count the vote the National Committee will, in every instance, appear by counsel, enter a formal protest and produce evidence showing that frauds have been perpetrated on the ballot-box. The matter will then go before the courts for adjudication, and we shall cheerfully abide by the result."

"On what particulars does the charge of fraud in the county based?"

"The Democratic majority in New York and Brooklyn have been increasing, the plurality for Cleveland being by step since Tuesday night, so that now the vote is fully 3000 higher, according to their figures, than it was at the close of the polls. This is a matter that calls for an explanation, and we have some facts in our possession which may throw light on it. These facts we mean to keep to ourselves until the proper time comes to produce them before the proper tribunal."

"Aside from the count, is there anything else on which Mr Blaine's friends base the charge of fraud?"

"We hold that votes were counted for Cleveland which, under the law, should have been thrown out, and that ballots were thrown out which should have been counted."

"Outside New York and Brooklyn, in what counties do you charge that fraud was perpetrated?"

RETURNS AND ESTIMATES

"We are not prepared to make public the specific list at the present moment. We shall do so in good season. Queens County, Ulster and St Lawrence will receive special attention. In one polling place in Ulster County Cleveland is credited with thirty three more votes than the entire vote polled. In St Lawrence County the Democrats claim a gain which is 300 votes the 1 of all the estimates.

"Our returns are not yet complete. We have estimated in all cases, but the full official returns from ten counties are not wanting. We do not want to arouse feeling by making our estimates public, preferring to await the complete official returns. We do not propose Cleveland shall take his seat by fraud, but if we learn that he has been fairly elected we shall freely concede the fact. There is no necessity for haste or undue excitement. This business will, in due course, right itself."

"The Republican National Committee does not concede the State to Cleveland by any means. It was the statement made by Secretary Jordan. 'When the returns are complete we are confident that they will show sufficient majority for Blaine.'

Chairman Wants, of the State Committee, was found in his office house. "It is too early yet to give any definite results as we have not received the full returns from all the counties. We do not concede this State to Cleveland, but are assured that Blaine will carry it by a small plurality. Our figures are the official ones and we have not polled all on all this action. Pay despatches."

"What precincts are still in doubt?"

"I do not remember exactly, but there are still twelve to be heard from. Our figures come directly to us from the chairman of the Republican Committee in each county and are based upon the official count and not upon any such estimates as the newspapers give."

The One Topic of Conversation—Mr Blaine's View. His Health Better than for Ten Years.

A correspondent of the Boston Herald writes from Augusta: There is scarcely a topic of conversation of which the people are very pious, [illegible] upon the result of the election in the State of New York. If Mr Cleveland has obtained the plurality of even two votes, a proposition will be made to the Democrats of the United States that the belief of this community founded on investigation is that Mr Blaine has a majority of several hundred, and if that be so, every honest man will demand that it shall be officially declared. Until the official declaration shall be made, we ask the public to unite with us in an honorable effort to secure a fair count. Purity in elections is the only safety for Republican institutions.

JAMES H. JONES, Chairman.
SAMUEL FESSENDEN, Secretary.

Another Address—The People Adjured to Await the Result and Abide by the Decision of the Constituted Authorities.

The following address was issued by the Republican National Committee this evening:

Republican National Head quarters, New York Nov 8 The Republican National Committee are taking the most careful and thorough measures to detect errors, if any, and frauds, if any, have been committed in the returns of the Presidential election in the State of New York. If Mr Cleveland has obtained even a plurality of even two votes, a proposition will be made to the Democrats of the United States that the belief of this community founded on investigation is that Mr Blaine has a majority of several hundred, and if that be so, every honest man will demand that it shall be officially declared. Errors Discovered in the 24th Assembly District and Westchester County Returns.

Secretary Fessenden of the Republican National Committee this afternoon had a conversation at Police Headquarters with Joseph J O'Donohue, Republican member of the Police department, and at his conclusion telegraphed Mr Stephen Elkins and the others who had gone to Republican headquarters to some down-east place to be held subject as something of great importance demanded immediate attention. It is stated that mistakes have been found in the 24th assembly district and West Chester county returns which if corrected will give 400 votes in favor of Blaine.

Another Statement

The Bureau of elections of the city of which John J O'Brien is Superintendent has to-day received a telegram of 425 votes in favor of Blaine, the addition in several of the 18th of votes. The Lawyers Committee, that has been examining returns to-day, found them correct but to be added. The additions are made by a Republican and a Democrat and the returns were sent to the Bureau.

The Kings County Vote

The revision at Police Headquarters of election of this city in Kings County, shows 6,932 for Cleveland and 6,411 for Blaine, Cleveland's majority 521.

How Mr Daniel Manning States the Situation

ALBANY, Nov 8 The plurality for Cleveland in this state as now showed by official figures, received by Chairman Manning, of the Democratic State Committee is 1210 A number of counties will hold to-night in front of City Hall, at which final figures will be announced. Dispatches were sent to Cleveland, Hendricks, Governor Hill, Judge Park and other Democrats. Resolutions were adopted expressing the belief that the Democratic candidates had been elected and extending congratulations to satisfy the country.

An Investigation of Alleged Fraud

In view of the assertion that fraud has been perpetrated in the returns from the 12th ward Justice Quinn to-day began an investigation. A large number of witnesses were subpoenaed but only a few testified. Eugene Kerrigan was called to Governor's room to-day to identify a ballot which he replaced there. Mr Kerrigan testified that he voted for Blaine. Justice Quinn then adjourned the case until Monday next.

How Mr Daniel Manning States the Situation

ALBANY, Nov 8 The plurality for Cleveland in this state as now showed by official figures, received by Chairman Manning, of the Democratic State Committee is 1210 A number of counties will hold to-night in front of City Hall, at which final figures will be announced. Dispatches were sent to Cleveland, Hendricks, Governor Hill, Judge Park and other Democrats. Resolutions were adopted expressing the belief that the Democratic candidates had been elected and extending congratulations to satisfy the country.

An Investigation of Alleged Fraud

In view of the assertion that fraud has been perpetrated in the returns from the 12th ward Justice Quinn to-day began an investigation. A large number of witnesses were subpoenaed but only a few testified. Eugene Kerrigan was called to Governor's room to-day to identify a ballot which he replaced there. Mr Kerrigan testified that he voted for Blaine. Justice Quinn then adjourned the case until Monday next. Mr Kerrigan testified that he voted for Blaine. NEW YORK.

An Address from the National Republican Committee.

They Affirm their Belief that Mr. Blaine has carried New York State and is Elected.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. The Republican National Committee have issued the following:

HEADQUARTERS OF THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE
NEW YORK, Nov. 8

To the Republicans of the Country

We have carried New York, the official count will confirm it. Blaine and Logan have 218 electoral votes and are elected

Another Address—The People Adjured to Await the Result and Abide by the Decision of the Constituted Authorities

The following address was issued by the Republican National Committee this evening:

Republican National Head quarters, New York Nov 8 The Republican National Committee are taking the most careful and thorough measures to detect errors, if any, and frauds, if any, have been committed in the returns of the late election in the State of New York. If Mr Cleveland has obtained even a plurality of even two votes, a proposition will be made to the Democrats of the United States that the belief of this community founded on investigation is that Mr Blaine has a majority of several hundred, and if that be so, every honest man will demand that it shall be officially declared. Until the official declaration shall be made, we ask the public to unite with us in an honorable effort to secure a fair count. Purity in elections is the only safety for Republican institutions.

Errors Discovered in the 24th Assembly District and Westchester County Returns.

Secretary Fessenden of the Republican National Committee this afternoon had a conversation at police headquarters with Joseph J O'Donohue, Republican member of the police department, and at his conclusion telegraphed Mr Stephen Elkins and the others who had gone to Republican headquarters to some down-east place to be held subject as something of great importance demanded immediate attention. It is stated that mistakes have been found in the 24th assembly district and West Chester county returns which if corrected will give 400 votes in favor of Blaine.

Another Statement

The Bureau of elections of the city of which John J O'Brien is Superintendent has to-day received a telegram of 425 votes in favor of Blaine, the addition in several of the 18th of votes. The Lawyers Committee, that has been examining returns to-day, found them correct but to be added. The additions are made by a Republican and a Democrat and the returns were sent to the Bureau.

The Kings County Vote

The revision at Police Headquarters of election of this city in Kings County, shows 6,932 for Cleveland and 6,411 for Blaine, Cleveland's majority 521.

DR CROSS'

Great cures are constantly exciting so much attention and bringing so many new patients that notwithstanding his pressing business in Portland, he finds it absolutely necessary to return to the Island Home for a short time. He will therefore go to Portland Monday, arrange his business and return to the Bangor House, Wednesday, the 26th inst. No man ever visited Bangor whose success, over approached that of Dr. Cross. The question is constantly asked, is he a humbug? This can be satisfactorily answered by referring to the scores of cures in our midst. Those who have taken his advice admit that no man can compete with our own, and publish cures (work after week) of well known and reliable citizens, which can be seen at any time, are if not the truth. The Doctor does not claim to cure everybody, but those visiting him can expect a candid and satisfactory statement of their case. See advertisement.

AMUSEMENTS

No 1

The Boston Museum Company appeared at the Opera House Saturday evening in the three act farcical comedy Rugby preceded by the charming one act play Mr Uncle's Will The two principal parts in the latter were finely played by Miss Annie Clarke and Mr Charles Barron who are undoubtedly the finest players in the Museum company Their acting was superb and the audience was very highly amused throughout the presentation Mr James Burrows played the other part very acceptably "Nunky" was then presented and provoked great mirth throughout The situations were conducted in the extreme and were greeted with roars of laughter Mr Ian Robertson as Rev Richard Simpson was greeted with great applause when he first came upon the stage His role is a difficult one but it was played to perfection

Mr Alfred Hudson in the part of Mr John Cowperthwaite was a perfect success His acting was very natural, and was received with great applause at intervals during the play Mr George R Parks as Dick Cowperthwaite sustained his reputation for the casting Mrs J R Vincent as Miss Mary Freeman was greeted with applause when she first came upon the stage and it was very cold at that this baby had many friends among the audience. Her acting as always was genuine and she plays her role in "Nunky" perfection. The other parts were as finely taken as those mentioned. Where all do so well it is hard to make any distinction. The company is a favorite one, here and never before has any inferior actors encroached upon the stage Whenever they visit Bangor they may feel sure of a cordial reception

NEW YORK'S ELECTION LAW.

How the Vote is Counted, and the Precautions Against Fraud.

The following is the general election law of the State of New York

ARTICLE FOURTH.

25 As soon as the poll of an election shall have been finally closed the inspectors of the said election, in their several districts, shall proceed to canvass the votes, such canvass shall be public, and shall not be adjourned or postponed until it shall have been fully completed.

26 The canvass shall commence by a comparison of the poll lists, from the constitutional enrollment and correction of any mistakes that may be found therein.

27 Each box being opened, the ballots contained therein shall be taken out and counted separately and before any ascertain that each ballot is single and, if two or more ballots shall be found so folded together as to present the appearance of a single ballot, they shall be destroyed. If the whole number of ballots exceed the whole number of votes, and not otherwise.

28 If the ballots shall be found to exceed in number the whole number of votes on the correspondent columns of the poll list, they shall be replaced in the box, and one of the inspectors shall, without seeing the same, publicly draw out and destroy so many ballots, unopened, as shall be equal to such excess.

29 The canvass shall be completed by ascertaining how many ballots of the same kind, corresponding in respect to the names of persons thereon and the offices for which they are designated, have been received; and the result having been found it, the inspectors shall severally attach to a statement of such canvass one ballot of each kind found to have been given for the officers to be chosen at such election, any or either of them except those given for President and Vice-President and then shall state in words at full length, in so many copies opposite such ballot, and written partly for each ballot and partly on the paper to which it shall be attached the whole number of all the ballots that were received which correspond with the one so attached, so that one of each kind of the ballots received at such election for the officers then to be chosen shall be attached to such paper, with a statement of such canvass. They shall also annex to each paper on the original ballots rejected by them as being defective which were given at such election.

30 When electors of President and Vice President shall be chosen at any election the inspectors shall make a separate canvass and statement of the votes given for electors in the manner prescribed in the last preceding section by recording how many ballots of the same kind corresponding in respect to the names thereon have been received and the result being found the inspectors shall severally attach to each paper on original ballot of each kind found to have been given for electors and shall state in words at full length opposite such ballot in writing partly thereon and partly on the paper to which it shall be attached the whole number of ballots for electors that were found to have been received corresponding with the one so attached. They shall also annex to each paper all original ballots for electors rejected by them as being defective.

31 When each of the several statements shall be completed the inspectors shall enclose and certified statement in a box to be directed to the clerk of the county and immediately deliver the same to the sheriff of the county, or his deputy, who shall safely keep the same and deliver it to the board of canvassers hereinafter mentioned.

32 Upon such statements they shall then proceed to determine and declare what person is have been by the greatest number of votes duly elected to such offices or either of them.

ARTICLE SECOND

4 The county clerk of each county shall make three certified copies of the statement of votes given for electors in his county, immediately after recording the same, and forthwith transmit by mail or other safe conveyance one of such certified copies to the Governor, another to the secretary of state, and deliver the other one hereof after directed

One of the certified copies of such statement of votes given for electors in his county, immediately after recording the same, by the clerks of such counties respectively as hereinafter ted on the day next succeeding that on which the canvass of the votes by the inspectors of election in the several wards of the city of New York, and the boards of canvassers in the several counties of the state, shall have been completed, by ascertaining how many ballots of the same kind, corresponding in respect to the names of persons thereon and the offices for which they are designated, have been received; and the result having been found it, the inspectors shall severally attach to a statement of such canvass one ballot of each kind found to have been given for the officers to be chosen at such election, any or either of them except those given for President and Vice-President and then shall state in words at full length, in so many copies opposite such ballot, and written partly for each ballot and partly on the paper to which it shall be attached the whole number of all the ballots that were received which correspond with the one so attached, so that one of each kind of the ballots received at such election for the officers then to be chosen shall be attached to such paper, with a statement of such canvass. They shall also annex to each paper on the original ballots rejected by them as being defective which were given at such election.

5 When electors of President and Vice President shall be chosen at any election the inspectors shall make a separate canvass and statement of the votes given for electors in the manner prescribed in the last preceding section by recording how many ballots of the same kind corresponding in respect to the names thereon have been received and the result being found the inspectors shall severally attach to each paper on original ballot of each kind found to have been given for electors and shall state in words at full length opposite such ballot in writing partly thereon and partly on the paper to which it shall be attached the whole number of ballots for electors that were found to have been received corresponding with the one so attached. They shall also annex to each paper all original ballots for electors rejected by them as being defective

6 Upon each of the several statements the inspectors shall make and certified copy of the same, and forthwith transmit by mail or other safe conveyance one of such certified copies to the clerk of the county in which the city of New York is situated, and deliver the other one hereof after directed

7 The board of canvassers shall within ten days after the election, make and file in the office of the secretary of state a statement, certified by them and by the clerk of the county of Hamilton, of the whole number of votes given at such election for each person for whom any vote shall have been given for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, senator, member of assembly, attorney general, treasurer, secretary of state, comptroller, surveyor general and canal commissioner, and for each amendment proposed to the constitution, and for and against each question submitted to the people, and the number of votes given in each county for each of such officers, and for and against each such amendment and question, and the number of votes for each person for any office other than those specified in this section, and the number of votes for and against each question submitted to the people other than constitutional amendments, and shall deposit the same in the office of the secretary of state.

8 The board of canvassers shall within ten days after the election, make and file in the office of the secretary of state a statement, certified by them and by the clerk of the county of Hamilton, of the whole number of votes given at such election for each person for whom any vote shall have been given for the office of governor, lieutenant governor, senator, member of assembly, attorney general, treasurer, secretary of state, comptroller, surveyor general and canal commissioner, and for each amendment proposed to the constitution, and for and against each question submitted to the people, and the number of votes given in each county for each of such officers, and for and against each such amendment and question, and the number of votes for each person for any office other than those specified in this section, and the number of votes for and against each question submitted to the people other than constitutional amendments, and shall deposit the same in the office of the secretary of state.

Why Did He Wed Her?

BY MRS. SOUTHWORTH,

AUTHOR OF "THE HIDDEN HAND," "SELF-MADE," "THE BRIDE OF AN EVENING," ETC.

CHAPTER I.
IN THE ATTIC.

"Palma, will you give me the legal right to care for you? Will you have me for your husband?" he asked, gently, taking her hand and bending over her.

"Oh, sir! do you mean it?" Can you mean it?" she breathed, gazing up in his face, with childish frankness, surprise and delight—the falling light kindling in her dark eyes, the fading color flushing in her wan cheeks!

"I do mean it, dear child. Will you give yourself to me?" he asked, smoothing her dark hair with his jeweled hand.

"Yes, oh, yes, if you want me; but I am such a poor creature," she answered, holding out to him her wasted hand, and smiling faintly.

"So be it, then," he said, lifting the little hand to his lips.

"What a mockery!—Sir, you must be mad," severely spoke a woman who stood beside the poor invalid chair in which the fading girl reclined, and over which the fine gentleman leaned.

She was right.

It did indeed seem a mockery—a cruel, bitter, insulting mockery.

For the words of this startling proposal of marriage were in the attic room in the attic of an old tumbling down tenement house, in the lowest and most thickly crowded quarter of New York city.

It was a room of about twenty feet square, but the back roof sloped from the boards half way across the low ceiling. The bare walls were freshly whitewashed, the bare floor cleanly scrubbed. To the left, in the corner, stood a poor little cheap sewing machine—idle now, these many weeks, since the work had fallen from the failing hands of the fair young seamstress.

On the right side of the room, with its head against the wall, stood a small, single cot bed, covered with a patch-work quilt of many colors. To the right of this stood an old bureau, with a toilet covered by a white cloth. On it lay a Bible, a prayer-book and a hymn-book. To the left was a pine table, also covered with a white cloth.

Such was the scene in which our drama opens. X—for the actors—

The first speaker was Cleve Stuart, a man in the morning of life, health and strength; a splendid handsome, stately blonde, with fresh complexion, blue eyes and silky, yellow hair and mustache. He was perfectly dressed in a day suit of gray tweed. He was an aristocrat from head to foot.

She to whom he spoke was a young girl scarcely passed childhood; a dark brunette, with a thin, dark face, large, expressive, dark eyes, and a wilderness of curling dark hair, wandering all over her head, neck and shoulder. The fires of fever kindled in her hollow eyes and burned in her wasted cheeks. And yet she was a creature of wondrous beauty even in decay. She was clothed in a faded blue wrapper, and lay back, propped with pillows, in an old-fashioned chair near the window.

The last speaker was a woman of middle age, with a tall, spare form, a pale, careworn face, and iron-gray hair.

"Why should it be a mockery, Mrs. Pole?" inquired the young man, dropping the hand of the girl and drawing himself up.

"It is all nonsense, and worse than nonsense. And you ought to know it, sir. The child is too young to marry anyhow, if she was even so well and strong. And, now, just look at her. She——Oh, you needn't stare at me and shake your head, sir! She knows her state. She is fully reconciled to it. The minister has been with her every day for a week past. She is a young saint, prepared for heaven, sir; not a girl ready to be married."

Cleve Stuart did not answer this, but turned and took again the hand of the girl, and looked in her face.

She raised her brilliant dark eyes to his with a deprecating glance, and then replied to the woman:

"Don't, don't, dear nurse; you make me ashamed! I wasn't! Oh, far from it."

Cleve Stuart gently pressed her hand.

"But she is right in one respect, sir," continued the girl. "I do know my condition, and am reconciled to it. The Father will be done," she added.

"My dear child, while there is life there is hope, even for the aged; and you are young; in the earliest springtime of life. With a change of scene, pure air, good food and devoted attention, such as I would be sure to give you, day and night, health and strength would return to you. And you have said that you will give me the legal right to devote myself to you in this way."

"Yes, I said so; not because I hope to get well, but because I do want you to be with me always during the little time I have to live, even to the last of earth. I fear this is very selfish of me," she added, deprecatingly.

"No, no, my child, there is no selfishness in your wish, and it shall be gratified," he said, again caressing her dark hair with his hand.

Observe, my reader, that there was a touch of pity and benevolence in his words and manner towards this fading girl, but there was nothing of love or passion in either. Yet she did not perceive the absence of them.

"You are so good to very good to me, God bless you!" gratefully replied the girl.

He lifted the hand to his lips, and arose and took his hat and said:

"I will go out now and fetch a minister and a marriage license. We will be married immediately, and then I will never leave you again. I will take you at once out of the fetid, rabbit place and carry you, by easy stages, to the country, among the mountains and the forests, where you can have fresh air and cool breezes, and breathe the health-giving fragrance of the pines. I will be back here within the hour."

She put up her hand to stop him, and then said pleadingly:

"Oh, no, sir; no, please; not this day—not this, of all days!"

He hesitated in perplexity.

"But why not this day? Why not this hour? The sooner we are married the better, I think," he said; for, looking down in her wan face, and hearing her faint voice, he thought her days—perhaps her hours—were numbered.

"But to-day is Good Friday," said Palma gravely. "And we could not be married on Good Friday, you know."

"To-morrow, then?"

"Oh, no! That would be almost as bad. But on Sunday, after the morning service, if you will!"

"Very well, little devotee. It shall be as you please. On Sunday, then, between the morning and the afternoon service, I will claim your hand," he said, cheerfully.

"Oh, how vain! Sunday is thirty days off yet. And the doctor says—Now, there, sir! You needn't look at me so significant. I tell you she knows her state just as well as I do, and a deal better than you do. She laughed to go, I tell you, sir," persisted Mrs. Pole.

But then the failing girl spoke—

"Oh, no, nurse! Not glad to go. Reluctant, submissive, but oh! not glad!" she cried, in an impassioned tone. "Not glad, now that I know I am so beloved!" she added, turning her dark eyes on the young man. "I would like to live now, if indeed I would, if the Lord were willing."

"Dear little Palma, you must live! You shall live!" murmured Cleve Stuart, smoothing her hair with his hand, and speaking from the pity, not from the love of his heart, and deceiving himself into the belief that he spoke in all sincerity.

"I thank and bless you! I knew I need not die if you could keep me alive," she murmured, gratefully; but her voice was weary, faint.

"I think you had better go now, sir, I do, indeed. All this talk has tired her so much she is almost exhausted and needs rest," said Mrs. Pole.

Stuart took up his hat, but Palma held out her hand imploringly:

"Oh, don't leave me! Stay with me as long as you can! Please do!" she pleaded.

"I would stay with you always, if I might, dear child," he gently replied, drawing a chair to her side, sitting down, and taking her hand tenderly in his own and keeping it there.

"It's all wrong! all wrong! all wrong!" Mrs. Pole remarked, shaking her head.

"No, nurse. See! I can lean back in my chair and close my eyes, and start to sleep so contentedly, with my hand in his," said Palma, smiling placidly.

"Well, I hope you will be able to get a good rest before the parson comes, anyhow," sighed the woman.

"Is the minister coming here to-day?" asked the young man.

"Of course he is. He comes every day. But there was services in his church this morning, so he will be here this afternoon."

Palma was showing signs of extreme weariness. Mrs. Pole came and shifted the pillows behind her back, made her comfortable in her seat, and then brought her a glass of milk.

When she had drank it she sank back in her chair with a deep sigh, closed her eyes and dropped her arms by her side from sheer exhaustion.

"Nowadon't speak to her again for at least an hour, sir, please," said Mrs. Pole, as she went to wash and put away the empty glass.

Cleve Stuart nodded in silence, took the hand of the exhausted girl and held it in his own.

She seemed to have swooned into sleep, so still she lay, so low she breathed.

Mrs. Pole took up some needle work and sat at a little distance sewing.

So more than an hour passed.

Day was declining. The shades of twilight were falling, the attic room was darkening.

"I won't light a candle; it might disturb her," whispered Mrs. Pole.

"No, don't," replied Cleve Stuart, in a low voice.

But just then the sound of footsteps was heard coming up the stairs.

"It is the parson, and now I suppose I must light the candle," said the woman, rising to suit the action to the word.

The pale girl reclined, her eyes closed, her hands folded, her face turned to the wall.

"How blessed it is to wake and find yourself there!"

"Have you rested, dear child?" inquired Cleve Stuart.

"Yes, nicely," she murmured, in a dreamy tone.

"And you feel better?"

"Oh, yes, thank and bless you. You have done me so much good by only sitting by me and holding my hand while I slept so sweetly."

"I would like to hold your hand the night, dear child."

A step at the door and the sudden blazing up of the lighted candle stopped their talk. Mrs. Pole set the candlestick on the top of the bureau and went and admitted the minister—a venerable figured, tall, thin, broad-shouldered, and clothed in clerical black.

Young Cleve Stuart felt a sudden, irresistible impulse to avoid the reverend gentleman and the religious services.

He stooped and whispered, hurriedly, to Palma:

"I will go now, dear child, and leave you with your minister."

Mrs. Pole placed a chair near that of the invalid girl, and the clergyman seated himself beside Palma and began to speak to her.

Meanwhile, Cleve Stuart had passed out of the house and into the squalid, reeking street where his cab stood waiting for him.

With his scented, handkerchief held to his face, he entered the vehicle, and gave the order:

"Bristol and drive fast!"

Cleve Stuart sat back on his seat, gravely reflecting on the scene he had just left.

"Oh!" he explained aloud, striking the seat with his clenched fist, "what an accursed adventure is this that I am on! Why did I ever consent to it—why, by gods!"

Why, indeed, did Cleve Stuart, the haughtiest and most fastidious man in the city, the lion of the clubs and the idol of the drawing rooms, the scion of a historical race who had been illustrious in the Old World for centuries before they were known in the New—why did the proudest, handsomest, most elegant, and most accomplished descendant of such a race seek a wife in the person of a poor young sewing girl, who was failing from life in the attic of an old tenement house?

Was it from mad love?

Not at all, for he was not in the least in love with her.

Was it from any obligation?

No, he was in no way bound to her.

From charity?

No, for charity might have ministered to the suffering girl's needs by many better means than matrimony.

From a sense of honor?

No, for his honor was in no way involved.

Was it to make atonement for any wrong, real or fancied, he may have done by him or any of his kin to her or to hers?

No, for neither he nor his had ever wronged either.

Was it to fulfill the conditions of some revengeful will?

Not at all, for he was in no way concerned in any will, nor did he ever expect to be so.

Had he been jilted or offended by his sweetheart or betrothed, and did he wish to avenge himself by marrying instantly the very first woman who could be induced to accept him?

No, nothing of the sort. He was in "spoon and goose-wing" with all the world.

What, then, was the motive of this elegant young aristocrat for wishing to wed the poor, dying seamstress?

It would be easier to tell why she, in her evil purity, accepted him.

It was for the truest and simple reason: that she loved him—loved him only of all the human beings on earth; loved with all her soul, and had also loved him all her life. She was dying for his presence—though no one knew it—when he came to see her—and to have her, though he did not hope or even wish it, soon so.

Why, then, did he ask to wed her at all? The reason why will soon appear. The above we publish as a specimen chapter of this beautiful story, but the continuation of it will be found, only in the N. Y. Ledger. Ask for the number dated November 15, which can now be had at any news office or book-store. If you are not within reach of a news office, you can have that number of the Ledger mailed to you by sending six cents (postage stamps will do) to Robert Bonner, publisher, 182 William street, New York. Bangor, Oct. 15th, 1884.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.
The undersigned, Guardian of Alice F. Bailey, minor heir of David Bailey, late of Lincoln, in said County, deceased, respectfully represents that a minor is seized and possessed of the following described real estate, viz: One undivided third part of the [illegible] farm and house and lot situate in said Lincoln, and bounded [illegible] conveyed by Minnie [illegible] the time of his decease, being all the real estate of said deceased, owned at the time of his death, subject to the widow's right of dower therein.
That it would be for the benefit of said minor that said real estate should be sold, and the proceeds thereof put out at interest, or otherwise used for her benefit.
She therefore prays that license may be granted her to sell and convey at public or private sale, according to the requirement of law.
RACHEL A. BAILEY.
